Let Sean Connolly guide you around 'Africa's last Eden'

- See nature at its rawest, wildest and most untouched.
- Discover the windblown white-sand beaches of the coast, where gorilla, buffalo, and elephant come to wander the shores.
- Experience the all-night drums, dance, fire and faith of the traditional Bwiti rites.

The author had this to say on Gabon: 'In fact, little-visited Gabon has everything to become Africa's next big ecotourism destination, while the fact that it isn't a mainstream holiday location yet only adds to its attraction.'

About the Author

Sean Connolly first travelled to Africa as a student in 2008 and has been returning to the continent regularly to research, teach English or simply soak up the ambience in its countless little-visited corners (of which Gabon has many) ever since. He has updated or contributed to a range of Bradt's African and South American titles and authored the first two editions of Bradt's Senegal. When he's not discussing verb tenses, African politics or the merits of camel meat, you may find him hitching a lift atop a truckload of plantains, sampling questionable local delicacies (though he's recently had to draw a few lines, as Gabon truly excels when it comes to hair-raising foods!), or seeking out a country's funkiest records. Raised in Chicago, Sean stays on the move whenever possible, though lately you'll find him most often in Berlin.

About Bradt Travel Guides

Founded in 1974, Bradt is now the largest independently owned travel guide publisher in the UK, with more than 200 titles currently in print, over half of which have no direct competition from other guidebook lists. The company has won many awards including gold in the Top Guidebook Series category at the 2019 Wanderlust awards.
