

Uganda boasts a wealth of activities and biodiversity – let Philip Briggs guide you around this fascinating country.

- Track mountain gorillas with detailed coverage of options, groups, and their locations.
- Experience the most biodiverse and, arguably, most exciting safari circuit in Africa.
- Get active with white-water rafting on the Nile or trekking in some of Africa's highest mountains.

Philip Briggs says of this new edition: 'It's been with growing pleasure that I've documented Uganda's progress, as a country and as a tourist destination, over the course of nine editions of this guidebook. But progress begets progress, and doubtless the next few years will see a host of new and exciting tourist developments in Uganda.'

About the Authors

Philip Briggs has been exploring the highways, byways and backwaters of Africa since 1986. He first explored Uganda by bus and train in 1988, two years after it emerged from a decade of civil war and returned in 1992 to research the first edition of the Bradt guide. He has since revisited the country on numerous occasions both as a tour leader and to update subsequent editions of the Bradt guide. He is also the author or updater of many other Bradt titles, mainly to African destinations but also covering Suriname, Sri Lanka, Macedonia and The Peloponnese.

Andrew Roberts has lived in Uganda since 1993. Born in Britain, he first visited the country with a backpack in 1990 and returned three years later to help the Ugandan Forest Department set up ecotourism projects. Nearly 25 years later he's still there, now with a wife and two daughters. Andrew considers himself lucky to have worked in every national park in Uganda, settings which he greatly prefers to his office in Kampala.
