Let Paul Hubbard guide you around Zimbabwe, one of southern Africa's premier wildlife and cultural destinations

- Get active with an adventure holiday on the Zambezi River.
- See historical and cultural sites, such as the World Heritage-listed stone-built cities of Great Zimbabwe and Khami.
- Get tips on how to select a safari and see the best that Zimbabwe's national parks have to offer.

The authors had this to say on Zimbabwe: 'It's time to rediscover Zimbabwe's stunning attractions and World Heritage Sites; from the magnificent Victoria Falls and Zambezi River to Matobo National Park's ancient cave paintings; the game-rich national parks and Bulawayo's local craft markets and, above all, to meet or reacquaint yourself with the country's delightful people.'

About the Authors

On a visit to Zimbabwe soon after the country's independence, Paul Murray quickly established enduring friendships with some leading players in the Victoria Falls tourism sector. He developed a keen interest in all aspects of the country but above all, his love for Zimbabwe has been driven by the locals: 'probably the friendliest people I've met anywhere in the world'. Very frequent visits to Zimbabwe followed and one last Africa ambition came to fruition 10 years ago when he and his wife bought a house in Victoria Falls. Now located back in the UK due to family circumstances, he has handed over authorship to Paul Hubbard.

Born in Bulawayo, Paul Hubbard has lived in towns and in the wild all over Zimbabwe and currently works around the country as a professional tour guide. As part of his business, he travels around Zimbabwe leading tours and conducting research, both of which have given him an intimate knowledge of much of the country. With degrees in archaeology, he combines history, nature and culture into a fascinating romp through any area.
